

REDUCING THE BONDS

Which National Banks Are Required to Deposit as Security.

A MEASURE TO THAT EFFECT,

Which is Also Intended to Loose the Hoarded Treasury Money

INTO THE CHANNELS OF TRADE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The provisions of the amendment to the bill to reduce the amount of United States bonds to be required of National Banks and to restore to the channels of trade the excessive accumulation of money in the Treasury, are as follows:

Section 1 limits the compulsory requirements of deposits of United States bonds with the Treasury, by the national banks to the amount of $5,000 of bonds for each and every national bank, provided that the voluntary withdrawal of bonds for the retirement of national bank notes shall not exceed $3,000,000 in any case. It further provides that the act shall not apply to the deposits of bonds which may be required by this act to secure deposits of public moneys in national banks.

Section 2 provides that upon United States bonds deposited, or which may be deposited, bearing interest, any national banking association making the deposit shall be entitled to receive from the Controller of the Currency circulating notes of different denominations, not exceeding in the whole amount of the par value of the bonds deposited. It also provides that at no time shall the total amount of such notes issued by any association exceed the amount at such time actually paid in of its capital stock.

Section 3 authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue United States notes equal to the retirement of National bank notes below an accumulation of $180,000,000.

Section 4 authorizes the issue of United States bonds to an amount not to exceed $100,000,000, to be redeemed at the pleasure of the Government and to bear 2 per cent interest. They are to be sold for lawful money or coin certificates, and the proceeds are to be applied to the redemption or purchase of United States bonds.

GENERAL GRANT'S REMAINS.

The Resolution for Their Removal to Arlington Called Up.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Mr. O'Neill, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Library, called up in the House to-day the Senate joint resolution directing the President to request the widow of General U. S. Grant to permit the removal of the remains of her illustrious husband to Arlington Cemetery.

The morning hour expired without action on the resolution.

AND KAUFMANN'S SAID UNTO THEIR MANAGERS:

"Christmas is drawing close. Already thousands of holiday purchasers throng our establishment daily. They look to us to supply them with all kinds of Christmas gifts for less money than other stores charge. We consider it our sacred duty to meet their expectations. Besides, we wish to encourage to the greatest possible degree that beautiful custom of giving Christmas presents. Now, then, return to your respective departments. Mark down the price of each article or garment twenty-five per cent. Spare or reserve nothing. No matter how low the prices may be now, cut them 25 per cent lower. No matter how desirable the goods may be, make the reduction in every instance. These reductions are to go into effect on MONDAY, December 8, and will be continued until Christmas Day. You will also engage as many more salesmen and salesladies as you think will be required to give prompt attention to the crowds of Christmas shoppers who will take advantage of our reduced prices."

THE RESULT OF KAUFMANN'S ORDER! HOW IT WORKED!

On Thursday the edict went forth. Immediately thereafter thirteen managers, as able and competent a body as ever were given charge of important interests, were hard at work chopping off prices. And they worked and worked as worked they had never before. At last order came out of chaos. At 9 o'clock yesterday morning the managers filed their reports with the general manager, who turned them over to the advertising man for publication. But here occurred the first and only hitch. A hasty glance at the reports was sufficient to convince the writer of the impossibility to print within the small confines of this space the mass of matter and volumes of figures handed in by the managers. The Business Manager of The Dispatch, having too many other advertisements on hand, refused to give more space. Under these circumstances nothing could be done but to pick at random
